Restaurant technologies will always evolve and change, restaurant owners need to consider each new trend and determine if it is right for them. More and more restaurants are now accepting crypto as a new form of payment. For example, as of Jun 1, 2022 Chipotle Mexican Grill began accepting Bitcoin and other forms of cryptocurrencies.

Customers will use a payment provider app that will convert their digital assets into fiat money. When it's time to pay, the app will generate barcodes and the employees will scan the barcodes. It will automatically authorize the transaction and it will deduct the sum amount of crypto from the customer's digital wallet.

Giant retailers such as Amazon and Walmart have already initiated various projects and pilots to integrate crypto in their payment ecosystem. Starbucks, Burger King, Subway and even Pizza Hut are also already accepting crypto payment in various countries.

Currently there is a new trend where restaurants will collaborate with technology companies to offer a loyalty program, where members of the loyalty program will earn crypto as a reward for every transaction they make at the restaurant. One restaurant that offers this interesting promotion is Rosalita's Cantina that is located in Bali.
